

RAILROADS

GRAND HAVEN ROUTE.
Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad

STEAMSAIPS LEAVE DAILY,
Saturdays excepted.]

Detroit,	arrive	12:25 p
Niagara Falls,	"	8:25 p
Buffalo,	"	8:30 p
New York, sec. day	"	10:30 a
Boston,	"	2:40 p

State rooms free on Steamers.

Only one night on the cars between Milwaukee and New York, Boston and principal eastern cities.

SAVING $3.00
 n railroad, and $3.00 sleeping car fare, 100 mi n distance.
 Tickets on sale at all principal ticket offices
 the northwest, at Company's office, 395 Broadw and at Dock office, adjoining Union Depot, M waukee.
HARRY BRADFORD
 Passenger and Ticket Agent, Milwaukee, Wis
 my3045m

MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL Railway.

Trains Arrive.
From Monroe.....	8:35 a. m.
From Prairie du Chien.....	1:45 p. m.
From Chicago, Milwaukee and East.....	4:45 p. m.
From Chicago, Milwaukee and East.....	7:43 p. m.
From Monroe, Freight.....	1:05 p. m.

Trains Leave.

Chicago, Milwaukee and East.....	8:53	a. m.
Chicago, Milwaukee and East.....	12:10	p. m.
Madison, Prairie du Chien and St. Paul.....	3:40	p. m.
Monroe.....	7:48	p. m.
Monroe, Freight.....	4:40	a. m.

The 8:53 train arrives in Milwaukee at 12 a. m.
leaves for Janesville and Monroe at 4 p. m.

WM. E. NOYES,

V. R. CARPENTER, Agent
General Pass. Agent. [an30dawtjani']

UNIVERSAL PASSENGER ROUTE !

LAKE SHORE -AND- MICHIGAN

SOUTHERN Railway

— 502 —

The Only All Steel Rail

DOUBLE TRACK ROUTE

NEW YORK, BOSTON,
—AND—
EASTERN POINTS!

ut Ferriage or Transfer. Direct Connections at

FALO AND NIAGARA FALLS

With the

York Central and Erie Railways

East Central Route
The only Route East, via

AGARA FALLS.
Michigan Central
AND:
Great Western

RAILWAYS
and Connections.

Express Trains leave Chicago daily, except Sundays. Sunday Express leaves at 3:45 p. m.
CHICAGO, ILL.,
CHICAGO FALLS,
NEW YORK, BOSTON
 And all Eastern Points.
 Trains upon this line are thoroughly equip-

an Palace Drawing Room Sleeping Cars.
Pullman Cars run daily between Chicago and
New York without change.
Connect at Grand Trunk Junction near Detroit with the

and Trunk Railway,

...al points in Canada, New York and New
 ...d.
 ...ongers from Western Roads holding thro'
 ...are transferred free of charge to Michigan
 ...depot in Chicago.
 ...ing tickets can be purchased at all office
 ...nnecting roads in the west. In Chicago, at

General omce, where sleeping car accommocan also be engaged.

HENRY C. WENTWORTH,
General Passenger Agent

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

The notes and accounts due Bintliff & Colvin have been divided between them, each taking his portion. Those which are held by James Bintliff have been placed in the hands of Mr. B. F. Dunwiddie for collection, and the undersigned has no further interest in them.

R. L. COLVIN.

BRIEFINGS.

—Fire your crackers.
—Make ready to celebrate.
—The Council will counsel about the water-works question to-morrow.
—Rev. Mr. Sanderson left this morning for the East, for a month's vacation.
—South Jackson street is being sprinkled from West Milwaukee to Rock.
—Remember the ordinance in regard to clearing up alleys. The Marshal will soon go the rounds.
—The Lotos will take passengers to-morrow only on the west side of the river. The Temperance Brass Band will accompany every boat.
—Remember the dance at Apollo hall to-night under the auspices of Water Witch Engine Company No. 2. There will be a rousing good time.
—The receipts at the lecture last evening were $255, a little more than to pay expenses and the guarantee made by the citizens who took hold of the matter.
—The Congregational young folks give a dime entertainment to-morrow evening. "The Mistletoe Bough" will be presented, and ice cream will abound.
—The pupils of Mrs. St. John and Prof. Fillmore will give a choice musical recital next Tuesday and Saturday evenings. The programme will soon be issued.
—The report yesterday that Dr. Loomis and wife were making a visit in the North end of the State, was without foundation. The doctor is home attending to business.
—Prof. Bischoff arrived from Washington this afternoon and will furnish some music for the Congregational entertainment at Lappin's hall to-morrow night. His old friends will flock to hear him.
—The African band, which belonged to Mr. Burr Robinson, and which died about two years ago, was prepared for the cabinet at Geneva Lake, and has been brought to this city by F. L. Tappin, who has placed it in his Museum in the Myers house block.
—This forenoon, while Harry, son of Ald. McKinnay, was engaged in playing with other boys on the fair ground, he fell from one of the sheds and broke his left arm. It was reset by Dr. Robinson, and this afternoon Harry is in a comfortable condition.
—St. Patrick's church will hold a picnic at Crystal Springs to-morrow, under the management of Father Doyle. The Lotos will make regular trips during the day. The band will play on the boat. In the evening a dance will be given at Young America hall.
—We wish to call the attention of the young and old, the rich and the poor to the fact that the edicts have gone forth namely: that manifestations of loyalty by shooting off any kind of fire arms, fire crackers or other fire works will be strictly prohibited on the 4th of July in Milwaukee. Sold.
—Miss Mary Thomas, of whom we spoke yesterday, has walked to-day, 16 miles in four hours and five minutes. She will finish the 25 miles in good season. Her fastest time was one mile in 9 minutes and 2 seconds. She is walking in rear of Thomas meat market at East Milwaukee street.
—The rendering of "Mistletoe Bough" by the young people of the Congregational church will take place to-morrow evening at Lappin's hall. The entertainment will be a good one, and will draw out a large audience. There will be no matinee to-morrow afternoon. The admission will be only ten cents.
—A fine exhibition of fireworks will take place at the Corn Exchange square on the evening of July 4th. It is expected the contributions will be generous, but in order to insure success, weather permitting, and that there may be no disappointment, the time has been extended—until 1879—when they will be declared off—the fireworks.

FELL IN THE RACE.

This forenoon while a number of boys were congregated around the platform in the rear of Mr. Hanson & Co's warehouse practicing the art of spearing fish, Otto, a son of Mr. John Schicker, who was playing the same vocation, missed his footing and fell in. Had it not been for the timely assistance rendered by Mr. Moses, whose place of business is immediately opposite, where he lay immersed, a Coroner's inquest might have been the result.

PERSONALS.

—His Honor Judge Conger, Hon. J. B. Cassaday, Hon. John R. Bennett, and Hon. John Wiggins started north, this afternoon to attend the opening of the Sturgeon Bay Canal, which takes place to-morrow. They will take a steamer to-morrow morning at Green Bay, and sail through Sturgeon Bay and Canal into Lake Michigan, and return to Green Bay in the evening.
—Mrs. Little Superintendent of the Institution of the Blind, Rev. W. Sanderson, Mr. W. B. Terry, and Mrs. Deakin, formerly Mrs. Lightbody, started for the East to-day. Mr. Sanderson will go direct to Boston, and will be about three weeks.
—Rev. E. D. Huntley will speak at Peewaukee to-morrow afternoon and Menomonee Falls in the evening.
—Mr. E. F. Bliss, of Cincinnati, son of Mr. Cyrus Bliss of this city, is in town, and will while away the summer months in the Bower City.
—Rev. T. P. Sawin delivers an oration at Geneva Lake on the Fourth.
—Hon. H. A. Patterson will speak to a large audience at Shepore to-morrow.
—Hon. Fenner Kimball and Mr. D. D. Bennett went to Geneva Lake to-day to look after the interests of the Bower City Band in that famous summer resort.

JOSEPH COOK.

The Congregational church last evening was well-filled with those anxious to see and hear for themselves, Rev. Joseph Cook, the famous Boston lecturer. At eight o'clock he entered the church accompanied by Rev. T. P. Sawin who introduced him to as well made up an audience as ever collected in the church. His subject of "Does Death End All?" was not perhaps the most popular which he could have chosen, but it was none the less one which was full of interest especially with his mode of treatment. The lecture was not an attempt to prove the immortality of the soul, directly, but a climax of arguments giving a simple negative answer to the query. It was a strong clinching and complete overthrowing of materialism, by calling in the aid of science only. All claims of inspiration and revelation were laid outside, and the speaker drew his conclusions from the basis of pure scientific truth. No synopses of the lecture could do it justice, so full was it of closely linked arguments, based on generally admitted facts. At times during the lecture a climax would be reached which would thrill the audience, and amply repay for the rather wearisome statement of detailed facts, which preceded each such climax.

Those who went to the lecture last evening as to a mere entertainment, expecting to sit idly there and be tickled and pleased, and carried against their will to the zenith of enthusiasm, were greatly disappointed. The lecture was not an entertaining one, but was grandly educational in its character, and those who went there to think with Mr. Cook, and to follow closely his argument, were more than satisfied.

It is not more fun to hear Mr. Cook. It is work, but work that repays. Probably in the majority of those who heard him were disappointed in his oratory. He is far from being a finished orator. Throwing aside all established features of oratorical art, he goes at his theme like a giant blacksmith apparently caring for nothing but to put in good heavy blows. He does not seek to play upon the emotions, and impresses his hearers with the fact that he should be ranked as a thinker rather than an orator.

As to his personal appearance no better description can be given than the following given by another: "He is of medium height, stout—not fat—and his head! I never saw such a head on a man. A lion's comes nearer to it than anything I know for fitting comparison. His straight hair is very much the color and thickness of a mane too. He wears a full beard, shaved a little low on the cheeks and entirely away from his mouth, which is well shaped and thin, his nose is perfectly straight and nostrils beautifully curved. But his eyes? When he opens them they pop out from under full light brows, and one wonders that they don't burst from their sockets."

A lady in Westchester County, New York, made $1,300 lately by an investment of $105.25. Alex. Frothingham & Co., 12 Wall Street, New York, were her brokers. Sold for her Financial Report. You may be equally as fortunate.

CITY NOTICES.

Chaste as Ice, and Pure as Snow.
The fragrant Soudolant is a scientific composition of the purest and choicest ingredients of the Oriental vegetable kingdom. Every ingredient is well known to have a beneficial effect on the teeth and gums. It removes all disagreeable odors, even that of tobacco. It speedily removes those ravages which children sustain in their teeth, owing to improper use of sweet and acid articles, which imperceptibly destroy them.

Spalding's Glue, the stickiest thing out.

Ladies and Gents will always find the nicest and cheapest Box and Stationery in the city and neighboring States, No. 39 Main street.

Mother, do not let your darling suffer with the Whooping Cough. Use Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, and the little darling will soon find relief. Only 25 cents a bottle. Sold by R. B. Hammett.

The Home Insurance Agency.
Dimock & Hayner are agents for the oldest and strongest American and English Fire Insurance Companies. Among the list are such companies as the Old Atlas and Phoenix, of Hartford, the Home, Continental and Westchester, of New York, the Insurance Company of North America, Fire Association, Grand American, Pennsylvania, and Franklin, of Philadelphia, The Liverpool and London and Globe, Imperial and North, and Commercial Union of England, and the Western Assurance and British America, of Canada, and others.

You can now get insurance in the above well known companies at the lowest possible figures. This being the case it would seem useless to those who are desirous of insuring their property, to get the best at the best rates.

Liver is King.
The Liver is the imperial organ of the whole human system, as it controls the life, health and happiness of man. When it is disturbed in its proper action, all kinds of ailments are the natural result. The digestion of food, the movements of the heart and blood, the action of the brain and nervous system, are all immediately connected with the workings of the Liver. It has been successfully proved that Green's August Flower is unequalled in curing all persons afflicted with Dyspepsia or Liver Complaint, and all the numerous symptoms that result from an unhealthy condition of the Liver and Stomach. Sample bottles to try, 10 cents. Postively sold in all towns on the Western Continent. Three doses will prove that it is just what you want.

Excelsior Heat.
And nowhere else at this season of the year may speedily carry you to the grave. Parker's Ginger Tonic, by its corrective action on the entire digestive apparatus, will not only neutralize the action of the poison, but will also prevent those dangerous disorders from attacking the system. It may save your life, and should always be kept in the house. This pleasant remedy is unequalled for teaching children, nursing mothers. Possessing many additional virtues of extraordinary value, it is far superior to Eucalypti of ginger, without their constipating effects, and while more invigorating than liquor never intoxicates, nor creates any desire for stimulants. It cures Dyspepsia, and its varied symptoms of Headache, Nervousness, Flattulence of the Heart, Wakefulness, Sour Stomach, Costiveness, Liver Disorders, Furred Tongue, Low Spirits, Neuritis and Rheumatic Pains, enables you to enjoy the pleasures of the season without fear, and gives comfort after a hearty meal. Buy a $1.00 bottle of your druggist, A. J. Roberts, or a smaller bottle at 15 cents, and test its extraordinary merits.

COLLEGE DOINGS.

The Students Give up Their Books and Grasp Their Sheepskins.

Their Farewell Speeches, and Award of Diplomas.

Full Account of To-day's Exercises at Milton and Beloit Colleges.

AT MILTON.

WEDNESDAY.

The morning opened threateningly and for a time it seemed that the arrangements for the day would be sadly interfered with by some unwelcome shower, but the day finally proved as favorable as could be wished. The exercises were held upon the college campus, where two platforms were raised, one for the members of the Milton Cornet Band which furnished the music, and the more important one for the seating of the faculty, trustees, members of the graduating class, and dignitaries in general. The latter platform had the national colors for a background and was otherwise appropriately decorated. The audience were provided with settees and chairs above which was arranged a leafy canopy of boughs. Commencement day is one of the big days for Milton and vicinity, and at an early hour the visitors commenced swarming from far and near, swelling the numbers of those who had been attending all the exercises of the week. By 10 o'clock a large audience had gathered, and the faculty and other prominent took their seats upon the platform. Among the prominent seated beside the faculty were: State Superintendent Whitford; Prof. J. D. Bond, of St. Paul; Prof. J. B. Thayer, of River Falls; Prof. A. A. Miller, of Wausau; Rev. O. W. Whitford, of Walworth; Rev. Mr. Powell, of Johnston; Revs. Bailey, Loomis, Rogers, Bristol, and Rev. N. Wardner, D.D. of Milton, Superintendent Tracy, J. S. Bliss, of Janesville, and others.

President Albert Whitford formally opened the programme by announcing music from the Milton Cornet Band. This band is made up of beardless youths, the most of whom have not yet reached their majority. They have only drilled together for about three weeks, and yet they gave some choice music, though attempting, of course, nothing very complicated or classical.

Rev. E. M. Dunn offered an earnest prayer, appropriate to the occasion. After another rendition from the band, the programme was furthered by the Salutatory Oration—John Henry Boyle, Cold Spring.

In accordance with old-time custom in all colleges the oration was, of course, Latin, and, of course, was but little understood by the majority of the audience, but they gave him a most hearty applause, all the same. His manner was cool, terse, good, and gestures graceful.

Orator—Thinking and Doing—Hattie Pamela Bacon, La Prairie.
The power of thinking was given to man that he might reach the undiscovered wisdom of God. The power of doing was given that he might show the discovery, and spread wisdom, truth and justice throughout the land. The mind of every man is independent. It seeks some one object as naturally as the mariner's needle seeks the north pole. Let a man's thoughts follow the one object and he will succeed. Whenever he gives great thought to any thing will improve it. The thinker, by receiving the thoughts of the poet, finds for himself the beauties in nature's gallery. The man who values the beauties around him cannot be wholly indifferent to the Maker of All. Great are the changes that man has made in the world since he first appeared. These only point to something better hidden deeper, something to discover, something to improve. There will be disappointments, for the world first makes wise men martyrs, and afterwards worship them as gods. It is not enough that we have thought, we must do. The world is thoughtful doing which blesses the world. Let every one by thinking develop his special gift, and employ his physical nature to execute his plans; grasping the diamond moments, setting them in the gold of opportunity, and then, when the thinking and doing cease at the sweet call of the Father, there will have been won the honors of a well-spent life.

Miss Bacon appeared without any manuscript, as do all the lady graduates of College. She was collected in her manner, a little stiff, and a little too economical with her gestures, but she showed much earnestness in her voice, which was clear and well handled. Her theme was handled in a practical manner, and her thoughts were clearly worded. As a whole her effort was a very fine one.

Orator—Progress of the Bible—Hosie Whitford, Rock, Milton.
"For four thousand years the Bible has been the great civilization of mankind. From Mount Sinai, God gave the Jews a complete system of laws. While they were loyal to their divine legislator the Hebrews flourished, became a great nation, prominent in the arts and sciences. It is evident that Greece borrowed largely of Jewish ideas, and that her boasted advancement in civilization was, to a large extent, the result of God's revelations to his chosen people."

When Christ came, civilization received a fresh impulse. His teaching revolutionized the world. Though the good seed sown by his disciples was smothered by the darkness, ignorance and moral depravity of the Dark Ages, the germ still lived; and in God's own good time it sprang up in a mighty tree, extending its branches to the uttermost parts of the earth. The men who freed Europe from mind slavery were Bible men and they drew their inspiration from the word of God. If our present civilization be the result of the world's increasing ease and experience, why do not China and Africa copy with Europe and America? The chief difference between us and them consists in that we have the Bible and they have not. It requires little reflection to convince us that civilization and the Good Book go together. The Bible opens the way for all good. Infidelity has never rescued a single life of the sea from barbarism. The light of the Bible is always seeking out the darkest spots of earth to save the lost. With hardly a single exception, the great benefactors of the world in all ages have been led by the teachings of God. It is a false statement to say religion opposes scientific progress. The Bible has nothing to fear, but much to hope from established science. Nearly all the colleges in our land were founded by religious denominations; and most of their presidents are ministers of the Gospel. As a class our clergy are men of great culture and liberal views, while many of them are among our best scientists. No well established principle of science has ever yet destroyed a single sentence of the Bible; nor indeed, can it do so, for any honest investigation into the laws of nature but the more clearly reveals to us their author and their testimony to the truth of the inspired volume.

Mr. Rod's oration was clearly argumentative. He had a clinching way of putting his points, which were clearly set forth.

In manner he was pleasing, and in style earnest. Boring a little on the stage tones at times, he soon lost this when he became warmed up with his subject, and did himself and his college credit both in subject, material and his manner of delivering.

Music—Cornet Band.

A lively stirring air which was well rendered.

Orator—True Success—Miss Emma Frances Chamberlain, La Prairie.

Success is not a thing of chance. All are striving for it, though few ever reach the goal at which they aim. What is true success in life? It consists in being able to do to; in filling positions which our Creator designed us to fill. The first thing for us to do is to learn to know ourselves, the next step is to form systematic plans for a single purpose. The concentration of all our energies upon one object, will insure success. The more opportunities he outside of him. One great element which many lack is independence. It is what man does alone, that proves his worth. Great achievements are not accidental. The most important work progresses silently, for months or years, and finally the great result appears. Mental labor is not of minor importance, for often the least showy work is most productive. The manual labor will be easy in proportion as the thought has been complete. Night thoughts combined with right action make life a blessing. True success can only come from heaven. We must use our physical or mental work. Our Maker has given us a higher work; the rewards of which we reap beyond the grave. This work consists in saving the immortal part, and every mortal being should make this the supreme purpose of his life. Life is given that we may earn the rewards of true success, and prepare for their enjoyment. Only by walking in the footsteps of our Divine Exemplar, and making the most of ourselves and of all our opportunities, can we reach true success and gain a home in heaven.

In conclusion, Miss Chamberlain had an easy flowing style, which was quite attractive. Her thoughts were good but rather old. In delivering she showed herself at home on the platform, and with clear enunciation and graceful gestures made her theme and its treatment highly acceptable.

Orator—Influence of Christianity on Morality—J. E. Ziegler, Janesville.

Man is by nature a social being; and all influences brought to bear upon the social nature ought to receive our careful attention. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result of the religion to which he is attached. Without religion there would be no sense of moral obligation. Granting as we must, that religion is a powerful agent in shaping moral character, it is foolish to pretend to ignore the religious influence upon the character of the individual. The social nature is affected through the moral nature, which is largely under the control of religious opinion. The character of the individual is the result